It appears singular to me, there were the variety of dispute, which could not be authored the war—the United States or Mexico are told that the annexation of Texas after the declaration of the Mexican Government was return are told that the annexation of Texas after the declaration of the Mexican Government was return are. There may be a state of war without educt hostilities, and there may be hostile actin which do not amount to war, but between war, and the states of war without educt hostilities, and there may be hostile actin which do not amount to war, but between war, and with the war and the action of the control of the c ins firm decision to exact adequate reparation for them, it does not repel with contamely the measure of reason and peace, to which it is invited by its adversary."

Can we imagine language more arrogant and insolent? It is the language of a soverign to his vassal—of a conqueror to his prostrate foe. Would we have sent a minister penipioentairy to France, or England, or any respectable power, on such an assurance as this, while we were in a state of cirtual wear? We overlooked this haughty language in a sister republic, from the desire of peace, when from another we should have resented it. The ambassador is sent and rejected, because he was not a commissioner come to make satisfaction on one subject, and our demands on Mexico are to be postponed until we make "adequate reparation" for the injuries done to her! If the Mexican government had been sincerely and honestly disposed to negotiate, she would not have stood on this contemptible quibble. Mr. Slidell could not sink down to the humble character of Commissioner, charged with the single duty of making reparation for the alleged injuries done to Mexico, for he was also bound to seek redress for injuries done to our citizens. We had been in a state of at the country country of the sent of the state of the sent of the s and the ground of the refusal to receive the minister, and he had actually seen refused before the General reached that point.

According to Mr. Chay, the was was sirtually begun by annexing Texas—and if we had no right to annex it, (and Mr. Webster contended that we had a right) then the war was rirtually begun by us. As to actual hossilities, if the occupation of the country beyond the Neuces was actual hostility, notwith-standing every declaration to the contrary, then the occupation of Corpus Christi was actual hostility—but if this be not correct, then the war was begun by Mexico, by attacking our troops, shedding our blood, and making us princers of sear. In the mean time that war has not been without its effect in enlarging the views of the Mexican rulers. The battles of Mexico appear to have brought us a little nearer peace. The Mexican authorities were willing to hear what their fat against all negotiation willing to retract their fat against all negotiation to the complete powers of Mr. Trist, as they do to those of Mr. Sidedl, and were willing to yield California for a consideration, and Texas without it, provided we occupied the Neuces, and agreed not to introduce shavery in the ceded country, and also to secure to it religious toteration. No one after this can say, that the war has not produced something to compensate humanity for its horrors.

The physical frame of Mr. Clay is a wonderful one. He has just left this city, after a visit of some days, and he seems as vigorous and as firm in his movements as at any time in the past twenty years. We have been in the habit of seeing him a great deal one. He has just left this city, after a visit of some any positive idea was entertained of the nomination of Mr. Winthrop, but, for the others, with the exception of Mr. Tuck, who is not so distinctly connected with party obligations, I can discover no sort of justification, except in a spirit of fanaticism, which has been called the congnizes neither reason nor duty. Whether of madones with so much method as that exhibited to day, can be justified at all, is a matter of donbt. My personal views are against it, and in all candor, cannot perceive in the dogged obstinacy of these actors, any thing else than a purpose to gratify personal boadily and to acquire a species of notoriety, the enjoyment of which no honest man, vouched as a Whig, will cavy them.

I am rather gratified, that they chose such an occasion for the expending of their venom, for the enexyenionableness of the claims and the character of Mr. Winthrop, render perfectly palpable, the midvides which actuated Mr. Giddings and Mr. Patrice as I would desire but, annatance of occasion with the phenomena of the proposition of the cause of the characteristic of the service of the cause of the control of the

We are sure that there is not a Whig i We are sure that there is not a Whig in the country, who will not regret, deeply regret, the action of the Whig members of the House of Representatives who voted against Mr. McCormick for Postmaster, and thereby re-elected one of the most unscrupulous partisans of the Democracy to this important post. Far be it from us to deny the legal right of those gentlemen to vote as they did, but we are at a loss to know how they can justify the act in their party relations. The but we are at a loss to know how they can justify the act in their party relations. The Postmastership is the only political office of the House, and it has been placed in the possession of one of our most determined and violent opponents. If they are right in retaining Mr. Johnson, they have been wrong in refusing to re-elect Mr. French and Mr. Lane; for the argument which required the election of a Whig Clerk and a Whig Sermant at Arms is equally forcible in respect

Lane; for the argument which required the election of a Whig Clerk and a Whig Sergeant-at-Arms, is equally forcible in respect to the Postmaster. He is as much an organ of the majority as the other officers, and is in a position to exert great political influence by the manner alone in which he may discharge his duties. We will venture to assert that a Democratic majority would never have been found, under any circumstances, electing a Whig Postmaster.

Our objections are not to retaining Mr. Johnson. They are to entrusting the office at all to a Democrat. It is suicidal in a party point of view. If the Whigs who voted for Mr. Johnson did so to mark their condemnation of party proscription, why did they not vote for a no-party man? It seems to us that they have no manner of excuse for their course but that of sic volo, sic jubeo. The Whig electors, who elected these gentlemen, were required to sink all personal preferences and to vote for the nominee. Is it too much to require of Whigs to be bound it too much to require of Whigs to be bound by the rule which gives them a seat in Con-

In regard to Mr. McCormick, we think that he is, of all men. in the United States, the best entitled to the office. He is a proscribed Whig, succeeded by the very man who is now re-elected by Whig votes. He is an efficient party man, and has done as much for the advancement of the men and measures of the party as any other Whig in the Union. Every consideration demands his reinstatement in the office from which he was removed by party proscription.

The flour and grain markets in England have been sustained since last advices. Indian corn has been very active, and retailed at 40 shillings for some weeks. Cotton had advanced 1-8 to 1-4d., but it soon fell back to its old rates. American provisions continued to bear good prices.

Financial matters had slightly improved, though the failures continued. The price of money was high. The future, however, was promising. Nearly a million and a half pounds sterling in gold had been imported. The Bank of England demands 8 per cent., and its branches 9 per cent.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURBOAY, December 8, 1847.
The journal of yesterday was read by the clerk.
Mr. Jameson moved that when the House adjourn it adjourn over to Monday, in order to give the Speaker an opportunity of selecting the Standing Committees.

Speaker an opportunity of selecting the Standing Committees.

The Speaker sail that the unfinished business of yesterday was the first in order, but as it referred to the adjournment of the House for the purpose made, it could be considered by general consent.

Mr. Petiti and several others cried out, "read," "read," "read," "read," "The resolution was then read and agreed to. Mr. Peliolec gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to reduce the charges on postage.

The Speaker said the motion of the gentlemen was out of order.

The joint resolution to appoint Chaplains for both thouses was taken up, when

Mr. Petiti said that he would detain the House but a few moments. He had a solemn conviction that the House had no power under the Constitution to appropriate money for religious purposes. It was his full conviction, that the House had no power under the head on power to legislate upon the subject. At the time of the adoption of that instrument, he people of Marsiand were Catholic, and if the House passed upon the subject they would violate the freedom of conscience. Your constitution provided that we should not interfere with the subject. Peterday he solemnly held up his hand to support the Constitution, and he did not object that we should have a chaplain to open the House with prayer every morning, and offer it up to the Almighty God for them, but could we get a proper person to do that for us? He had no objection to one if he could be got, but we could not do so.—He would therefore move to strike out the words "various denominations." He was of opinion, if there be a religion at all, it ought to be a true religion—a Catholic religion—and if we are to have one, we are to choose it out of 460 different denominations that profess to have it. If the Senate heredown to be a subject. The next mendment that he would offer was, that the members should pay from out of their own pockets for the services of those persons.

He would repest again, that he had no objection to open the House for such a purpose. He for his conduct last session, he had called him an Infidel and other hard names. (Mr. P. was very sever on the person alluded to, charging him of being guilty of crimes for which he had but a narow escap from the Penitentiary.)

He continued by saying he would go for any re spectable man who would come forward and offer his services, and he would pay as much as any one of the houses would agree to. If you elect a man for the House, he estheaded you could do so for any other part of the Union. Let us then pay for our chaplein, as his services were for themselves and other part of the Union.

Mr. Pettil then offered his amendments that the words "various denominations" be struck out, and that the members pay the chaplains out of their own pockets, but they were rejected.

The original resolution was then put and adopted Mr. Henly moved that the standing committee o the House be appointed. It was agreed to.

Mr. Vinton offered a resolution to the effect that the rules of the last session be adopted for the gor erment of this, except that of the Committee or Commerce.

Mr. Henley esked if he had understood the gentleornhient of titls, except this of the committee or Commerce.

Mr. Henley asked if he had understood the gentle man from Ohio as offering his resolution as a substitute for his.

Mr. Cobb, of Georgia, rose to a question of order as the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio proposed to change a standing rule of the House.

The debate was continued by Messes. Vinton, Collamer, Rhett, Holmes, Schenok, McClelland, Henley, and Jameson—when our Reporter left.

Gilman, Halilmore Molgaga Md Capt Towndes, U S N Tylkin ble work has been laid upon our table by Mr. Adam.

It is a treasure to men of science and michanical tastes. The first two numbers are devoted to a history of the modes of raising water from the earliest times to the present day: It is astonishing how diversified are the exhibitions of the genius and through the state of the transition of the genius and through the state of the transition of the genius and through the state of the transition of the genius and through the state of the state of citizens met at the City Hall on Tuesday evening, at 7 o'clock, to make arrangements for a proper demonstration in honor of those Mexican heroes.

On motion of Walter Lennox, Esq., the Mayor was called to the Chair, and explained the objects of the meeting.

On motion of J. W. Jones, Esq., John T. Towers was appointed Secretary of the meeting.

On motion of J. W. Jones, Esq., John T. Towers was appointed Secretary of the meeting.

On motion of Wm. Archer, Esq., a committee of three were appointed for the purpose of preparing resolutions to carry into effect the objects of the meeting, consisting of Dr. Blake, J. W. Jones, and John Y. Bryant, Esqs.

Mr. Archer then addressed the meeting in a few eloquent and appropriate remarks, and concluding by recting an elegy on the feath of Capt. Samuel H. Walker.

The committee above named are requested to meet this evening, at 7 o'clock, at the City Hall.

The proprietors of the Plumbe National Daguerian Gallery, at Concert Hall, have recently arranged a new light for taking pictures which has proved successful beyond expectation. This light is introduced through the top of a building attached to the gallery, and its decided advantages over the side light, in which pictures are usually taken, are too apparent to be pointed out to the most indifferent observer. The ghashity appearance so often objected to in pictures taken by the usual mode is entirely avoided, as the light is so modified that the sitter experiences no inconvenience from sitting, and is thus enabled to preserve a natural expression, while the lights and shadows are so regularly differed over the picture that it resembles a highly finished engraving. Messrs, Page & Beach, the superintendents of the Plumbe Gallery, are deserving of much credit for their skill and perseverance in perfecting their beautiful art, and we are confident their merits will be appreciated by a discerning community.

HERE AND SAVOR'S CONCERT.—These master spirits propose to charm the ear and delight the imagination by their powerful performances on the violin and plane, to-morrow evening, at Carua's The announcement is enough to crowd the house.

REINHARD'S TRUES.—The sfflicted would do well to refer to the advertisement in another column upon this subject. By applying to Dr. Zacharish, the patient can get every information necessary, and procure this great supporter for this fell disease.

Cure roa Corse.—They who suffer from these annoying excrescences.—and who do not?—should go forthwith to Dr. Zacharish and have them out.—Then let tight shoes be avoided and you will have comfort for the rest of your life, if you dust the interitor of them every morning with pulyerized tale.

First.—We were awakened from a pleasant shumber this morning by the ringing of our fire bells; and after all the hubbub occasioned by boys, dogs, &c., it was ascertained by strict scrutiny that a chimney took fire. What a naughty servant, to rouse our good people up for nothing:

Court.—Criminal Court was sngaged yesterday in the case of Richard Baye (negro) charged with steal-ing a coat from Charles Hamilton—found guilty and sentenced to one year in the Penitentiary. Also on the case of Owen McGee, for an assault on Edward Hogan—this appears, from the statement of facts, an outrageous attack. He was found guilty. We hope the court will not let him escape a severe punishment.

Warcs Rerease.—Several violations of public order brought six or seven delinquents under notice in this department. Our city generally at this time of the year, le full of birds. They may meet with a plucking in more senses than one if they do not look well to it.

well to it.

An Appray.—It is scandalous that our city must be aroused at all hours of the night by a prowling set of rowdles, whose only intent is mischief and crime. A large number of these gentry congregated on New York avenue, near Northern Liberty market, last evening, for a set fight, and we are informed that, like the canine breed, they did "bark and bite" with a vengeance. We will look to them.

vengeance. We will look to them.

Christmas.—We are sorry to interfere with the sales of our friends, but when they vend articles that are illegal and dangerous, we cannot forbear giving a decided opinion squinst the traffic. Last night Dr. Jones left his carriage with a docile animal, standing on the avenue when some of our boys, to amuse themselves, let off a pack of fire crackers, frightening the horse, whose whereabouts is not yet heard of. Where were the city guard and police.

Work or Ngcasarry.—Unbuttoning a young antieman's waistcoat to enable him to pick up his cane.
Work or Mracy.—Unbooking a young lady's dress to enable her to sneeze.
